From the Pastor

Looking Forward to Spring

Soon the record-breaking snow will melt and the Donley family will tap our maple trees. The sap flows when the temperature stays above freezing during the day and below freezing at night.

We'll tap the trees, hang some milk jugs from the spiles and let nature take its course. For the past 15 years or so, we have connected with this ancient tradition.

Family and friends gather to collect sap, tend the fire and watch the slow process of transformation of sap into syrup. Those lucky enough to be around at the end of the day can drizzle hot syrup over ice cream or some fresh (clean) snow.

The part I like the best is the conversations that happen around the pots. We catch up on our lives, dream about what the new season will bring, or even solve a problem. Often pieces of the conversations end up in sermons (occupational hazard).

I also like the predawn time when I light the fire in the stillness and watch the mesmerizing flames lick the sides of the pot. There's almost a Zen-like quality to this part. The pot will often start to sing with the song of the first bubbles popping. This often coincides with the sunrise.

I'll start the season with a parka and boots on. A month from now, I'll be in shorts and tulip bulbs will poke through the now-frozen ground. It's almost like a resurrection. Who knows, we might still be boiling come Easter (April 9).

Blessings and Peace,

Doug Donley

UBC's Outdoor Sign Messages Resonate in Dinkytown

Readers of the Feb. 21 Minneapolis StarTribune were treated to a lengthy feature article on UBC's outdoor sign and pastor Doug Donley's knack in selecting its messages.

The article "Church Sign Has a Wink" cited some of UBC's past whimsical or witty messages. Of course, church signs have long been a part of the country's landscape. The article says "Donley uses his signs a little differently. He aims to spark a smile and spread the good word, sure, but he also tries to communicate his church's liberal views to passersby and weigh in on issues and current events."

The lengthy article, (120 column inches, including two large photos) is probably the largest story written about UBC within recent memory. Doug said the StarTribune made an initial contact in January and took the photo more recently. Several positive references to the article were online on Facebook the same day. Thanks to Pat Mavity, the sign had been painted and restored and looking good.

UBC's senior members will recall a long article which featured the church as part of a regular "Visit to a Church" column in the St Paul Pioneer Press in the '70s, when pastor Lee Freeman conceded that philosophically speaking "we are out in 'left field' "; a fire at the church in the '60s resulted in a prominent straight news story and photo about the event's damage. Shorter items about UBC would occur when the Minneapolis Star, the-then evening newspaper, carried a regular Religion section. The University of Minnesota's Minnesota Daily has also covered UBC events

Editor note: The link to the StarTribune article is only available to subscribers. A copy of the article is posted on the bulletin board outside the lounge.

FINANCIAL SECRETARY'S REPORT

UBC's budgeted operating income for 2022-23 is $365,885. This includes the final adjusted amount of $22,875 carry-forward from 2021-22 fiscal year and the Foundation distribution of $64,720.

Most of our income (52%) comes from the pledges made by members. To date, pledges are running a surplus due to several folks paying their pledge in full.

We sent more than $3,200 with our delegation last month for scholarships at our sister church and school in León, Nicaragua

Expected annual rental income is $74,000 (20% of our budget.) This is a large increase over last year's $60,000. Income to date for this item reflects a surplus as our largest renter received a grant and pre-paid some rent. In addition, we've received more than anticipated income from miscellaneous renters.

Other gifts and miscellaneous income provide 4% of our budget. These are mostly gifts made by pledgers beyond their pledge or from people who did not pledge.

The Foundation distribution is 18%, which includes 9% ($32,053) for the property manager position. The Foundation funds are transferred to the UBC checking account as needed by the treasurer.

You can scan this QR code to be directed to our webpage where there are a variety of causes to donate to.

So Far to Go – Awakening to My Responsibility to Change the Status Quo

By Betty Shaw

As I grew up in the segregated south, institutional racism was up front but not very personal to me. I didn't know any colored people. They didn't go to my church or school, play in my parks, swim at the YMCA pool or go to the beach. I didn't really think about that and it didn't seem strange to me at the time. It wasn't until I was about eleven years old that I gave any thought to race.

My dad was building a garage at our new house and had hired a "colored" man to help him with the construction. When lunchtime came, I called Dad to lunch and mom asked me to take the "colored" man's food out to him. "He'll eat on the lanai," she said. That didn't seem strange. After all we didn't know him. I hadn't been introduced and didn't know his name. But when mother washed his dishes separately, that did seem strange so I asked her about it. "Mom, why are you washing the helper's dishes separately when it would be easier to just put them in with ours?" I asked. "Your Dad prefers it that way," was her only comment. So I tucked that incident away and went on with my activities.

Not too long after that I confronted the idea of racism directly at my church. Church had always been a central part of my life. I believed the words to the songs we sang, "Jesus loves the little children. All the children of the world. Red and yellow black and white all are precious in his sight." "With God as our Father, brothers all are we."

It never occurred to me that my church was intentionally excluding "colored people" from our congregation. The topic never came up until one Sunday the lesson told a story about Native American war veterans being refused burial in a town cemetery in Arizona. I agreed with my teacher when she condemned that practice. So it seemed to me quite natural to ask. "Why is it that we won't allow "colored people" to be buried in our cemetery?"

I was not prepared for my Sunday school teacher's response. She was horrified at my suggestion. "That's not the same thing at all. Colored people are the descendants of Ham and were put on earth to serve the whites. Didn't your parents teach you any better than that?!!" Cowed and confused, I tucked that incident away muttering under my breath, "it seems like the same thing to me."

The next year my dad who frequently made "pronouncements" told me in an agitated voice, "If you ever marry a 'nr' I will shoot the both of you." At age twelve I wasn't thinking about marrying anybody but I was very taken aback by my father's words. I later learned that the Supreme Court decision in Brown v. Board of Education had just come out. But my privileged life continued without my giving race or racism any thought. Schools remained segregated. It didn't seem that the Supreme Court's decision was having any impact on my community or my life.

Social consciousness and certainly not social activism never entered my mind. My idea of "doing good" was strictly acts of charity and service. I might have made a good, gracious "plantation lady." Poverty, prejudice did not directly touch my world. I remained in almost total ignorance of the terrible impact of racism on my fellow Americans. I knew about slavery of course and self-righteously assured myself that I would have opposed it. But my view of slavery was the benign description given in Gone with the Wind, a book I loved and read under the covers far into the night.

When I got to college the civil rights movement was just beginning. I believed integration of schools was long overdue. I thought segregation was wrong and very un-Christian. I heard Martin Luther King, Jr. speak and was inspired by his words. I was embarrassed by segregationist rhetoric and violent behavior but, I am ashamed to say, that I did nothing to change it. I did not put myself on the line. I did not help. I was the "good person" who stood by and "did nothing."
